Women flock to Y for conference

By Lindsay McAllister

NewsNet Staff Writer

This weekend, five women and a 13-year-old will cram into a two bedroom apartment.

Although it may sound like living arrangements for a catholic convent, it's actually quite the opposite.

For the past two years, graduate student Shauna Hullinger has opened up her Wyview apartment to share with her mother and her mother's stake Relief Society presidency for BYU's Women's Conference. Hullinger shares the apartment with her 13-year-old daughter.

Those women, however, are not the only women who have called and asked for her hospitality.

"I've had at least 10 other phone calls from women wanting to stay with me for Women's Conference," she said. "There just aren't enough places for all the women who want to come to stay for the conference."

Hullinger's friend from Oregon, who came last year to Women's Conference, said half of her plane was filled with women on their way to the event.

Hullinger said she knows so many women who come that it is not uncommon for her to get midnight phone calls from friends in town.

"We just have so much fun driving around town and getting to know each other again," Hullinger said.

She attributes the Women's Conference excitement to the exceptional conferences of the last few years.

These participants are staying with Janeen's daughter for the weekend. Top: With help from a group leader, these women work on caps for the service prokects on Wednesday.

She said the group that stayed together at her apartment had so much fun last year, they want to make it a tradition.

Janeen Hullinger, Shauna's mother and education counselor in the Farmington South Stake Relief Society presidency, said she enjoys the spirit of the classes during the day and the evening performances.

She said she especially loves going home at night, laughing and giggling at Shauna's with her presidency.

"As a stake Relief Society presidency, we have always been really close," she said. "The conference just allows us to add on to that closeness."

Janeen said she is especially excited for this year's women's conference, because her stake, during its own conference, prepared 50 quilts to be tied for the BYU conference.

These quilts will be tied along with hundreds more on the first day of the conference and will be donated to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints' humanitarian aid department.

"We just feel like we're so much more involved this year," she said.

Although service and spirituality are the conference's focuses, Janeen said she enjoys other aspects of the conference just as well.

"I enjoy going to the bookstore to get some fudge just like all the other women do," she said.

Janeen also said she usually runs into people she has served with in other places she has lived and she likes being able to catch up on their lives.

She said, however, that although the fudge and reunions make it fun, it is ultimately a spiritual renewal.

"It's a refresher to break away, come to BYU, and have our buckets refilled. It's a time to get ourselves built up again – that's the important part."

Conference expected to draw 20,000

The ratio of females to males on campus will change dramatically this week with the arrival of BYU's Women's Conference.

The conference is co-sponsored by the Relief Society general presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

There will be 100 presenters in 65 concurrent and general sessions.

The conference will focus on the Savior being the answer to all problems.

"Women's Conference 2000 is celebrating this grand truth by offering a solution-focused conference," Wendy Watson, committee chair said on the Women's Conference Web site.

Around 20,000 participants are expected to attend this conference, said Jean Hwang, a member of the Conference committee.

Some of the featured speakers at the conference include Sister Mary Ellen W. Smoot, Relief Society general president, President Merrill J. Bateman and Steve Young.

In order to accommodate the number of attendees, Hwang said the participants have been encouraged to park in the Marriott Center parking lot and lots around Cougar Stadium.

LDS performers, including Kenneth Cope, Julie de Azevedo and Michael McLean, will come together Friday for "Women of Light: A Musical Celebration." The performance, in the Marriott Center at 7 p.m., will cost $12 or $15.

The choir, which will be composed of 2,000 conference participants, will perform at the closing session on Saturday.

According to the news release, 13 hours will be broadcast on KBYU-TV (Channel 11), BYU TV (Channel 9403), the Dish Network System (500 series) and the LDS satellite system in the United States, Canada and the Caribbean. Also, for the first time, it will be broadcast to Latin America.

The broadcast will run today from 4 to 10 p.m. MDT, and Saturday from 3 to 10 p.m. MDT.

Sessions will also be available on the Internet, at www.kbyu.org/womensconf, www.newsnet.byu.edu, and www.ldsworld.com.

Registration costs are $35 for the full conference or $18 for one day. Those interested can register on the Web site or by calling (801) 378-8925.

Tickets will also be available today and Friday at the Smith Fieldhouse or Marriott Center outdoor ticket booths.

BYU faculty, staff, students, administrators and their spouses can attend the conference at no cost. But they must pick up a name badge at the information desk of the Conference Center by showing their BYU ID.

Census tracks moving students

Census 2000 workers will start knocking on doors today to count households that did not mail in their Census forms. But one of the biggest challenges may be locating university students who have moved away for the summer.

"It's really important that we get an accurate count," said Anjali Olgeirson, media specialist for Census 2000. "The data is used to distribute funds to states for schools, parks and we need to know the characteristics of the community to do the day to day business of government."

So far, 68 percent of Provo and 70 percent of Orem has responded by mail said Brent Laurence, manager for Utah south Census 2000 office. The other 32 and 30 percent will have to be reached on foot.

However, getting an accurate count of BYU students who are considered a part of the Provo population is a tough job, said Laurence.

"The Census 2000 office has used a different strategy to count university students because they get out of classes before the census can be completed," said Laurence.

He said all on-campus housing census work has been completed. Off-campus will be a more tricky, but the Census 2000 office has been working with BYU officials to get most of the work tackled.

"President Bateman's office sent out two or three e-mails to remind students about the census. BYU bishops read letters to their wards from the First Presidency encouraging students to fill out the form," Laurence said.

Starting Saturday, Census 2000 workers will knock on every door that did not mail back a census form. If the residence is vacated, Census workers will have to dig a little deeper to get their information.

At this point, Laurence said, it becomes a bit like detective work.

Census takers will call the BYU Off-Campus Housing Office, get the name and number of the landlord for the vacated residence and phone the landlord for the names, ages and birth dates of the previous tenants.

"We have to get an accurate count of the student population at BYU so Provo can receive financial support from the state and federal government," said Laurence.

Laurence said Census 2000 needs information from out of state students as well.

"This is their primary residence for most of the year, so even if they're from out of state or a graduating senior they need to fill out a form."

Ruling on gay scoutmasters could end LDS Scout program

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has told the U.S. Supreme Court it will withdraw from the Boys Scouts of America, taking more than 400,000 Scouts with it, if Scouting is forced to accept gay scoutmasters.

Church officials have said previously that their Scouting units likely would withdraw from the BSA if a court forced the organization to allow gays to be scoutmasters.

Salt Lake City attorney Von G. Keetch filed a brief with the Supreme Court on behalf of the LDS church and four other religious organizations in support of the Scouts' ban on homosexuals

The U.S. Supreme Court was to hear arguments today on a 1999 New Jersey high court ruling that the Boy Scouts could not exclude gays. The justices are expected to rule in June.

"The Scouting movement as now constituted will cease to exist. ... The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints ... would withdraw from Scouting if it were compelled to accept openly homosexual Scout leaders," Keetch said in the Feb. 28 brief filed on behalf of the LDS Church, the National Catholic Committee on Scouting, the General Commission on United Methodist Men of the United Methodist Church, the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod and the National Council of Young Israel.

Boy Scouts of America national spokesman Greg Shields did not want to speculate on the impact such a pullout would have on the movement.

"We value the (LDS) church and its contribution to Scouting and the young people who participate in Scouting." he said. "The only thing I can say is that we will abide by the law."

Congress questions Reno on Elian raid

PROVO – Utah's Sen. Orrin Hatch and Rep. Chris Cannon are among Republicans questioning Attorney General Janet Reno's handling of the Elian Gonzalez case.

Hatch wants to see the government's documentation supporting the search warrant that led to Saturday's raid in which the boy was taken from his Miami relatives and reunited with his father.

The Senate Judiciary Committee wants to investigate the raid.

Cannon also has questions about the necessity of the raid, said spokesman Jeff Hartley.

"There was no risk of flight, no risk of harm to the boy," Hartley said.

Reno met behind closed doors with Hatch and other senators Tuesday and told them that the possibility of firearms in the house was a key consideration for the military-style raid, participants said.

Petition opposes engineered squash

WASHINGTON -- Environmental groups asked the government Wednesday to withdraw its approval of genetically engineered squash because of concerns that it could cross with a wild relative and make it a hardier weed.

The squash is modified to make it resistant to plant viruses. A recent study by the National Academy of Sciences questioned whether the Agriculture Department had considered adequately whether the virus resistance could spread from the squash to its wild cousin, which is a pest to farmers in some southern states.

In a petition to USDA, the groups said the squash case showed that the process for approving genetically engineered crops is inadequate. In addition to seeking withdrawal of the squash, the petition asked the agency to require more testing and analysis of biotech crops.

Ogden man jailed for killing girlfriend

OGDEN - A man who killed his girlfriend and put her body in a car trunk was sentenced Wednesday to between five years and life in prison.

Martin Serratos, 35, pleaded guilty to a charge of murder March 21 in return for the prosecution's 12-year sentence recommendation. He strangled Maria Cubillas in Ogden on June 29.

He was arrested the day after the killing in Juab County when deputies found the body of the 38-year-old woman in the trunk of his car. He confessed to Ogden police that same evening.

Police said Serratos was headed to the Las Vegas desert to bury her, but his car broke down.

He told police he killed his live-in girlfriend when she kept prodding him to sell drugs to make extra money so they could get married, according to testimony at his preliminary hearing.

He strangled her when she suggested he was a police informant because he wouldn't sell drugs and told him her family would kill him, police said.

Star of David abandoned as dog wear

BERLIN -- Organizers of a rally opposing a ban on certain breeds of dogs canceled plans Wednesday to have their pets wear yellow stars of David, bowing to criticism that the gesture would insult Holocaust survivors.

"We distance ourselves from these plans and apologize to Jewish citizens," the organizers said in a statement.

The reversal came a day after the head of Germany's Jewish community criticized the protesters' plan as "revolting bad taste." Organizers had planned to parade through Berlin at a mid-May rally with their dogs wearing the same emblem the Nazis forced Jews to wear for identification.

The demonstrators had wanted to display the yellow stars to highlight their claim that a planned city ban on attack dogs, such as pit bulls, amounts to racism.

A series of dog attacks across Germany has led to public outrage and calls by authorities for a ban on breeds considered unpredictable and aggressive.

Scripture of the Day

"Yea, I know that I am nothing; as to my strength I am weak; therefore I will not boast of myself, but I will boast of my God, for in his strength I can do all things; yea, behold, many mighty miracles we have wrought in this land, for which we will praise his name forever."

"Most kids still think the milk comes from the store," Russell said.

Rex Larsen, Utah County president of the Utah Farm Bureau Federation, said most kids are four generations away from farms.

"We want to show them why it's important to keep American farms strong," Larsen said. "It's a fun day for kids to get out of the classroom to see where their leather shoes and ball mitts come from."

Elementary children spent about an hour and 45 minutes learning about agricultural products, ranging anywhere from wool and meat to produce and dairy.

Students learned the basics of how plants grow.

Space mission postponed, station waits

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. -- For the third time in as many days, high wind kept space shuttle Atlantis and its crew from flying to the aid of the international space station on Wednesday.

This time, however, the bad weather was across the Atlantic, more than 4,000 miles away at emergency landing sites in Morocco and Spain. That made the delay all the more frustrating, especially since the mission is off until at least next week -- and possibly mid-May.

"The stars just didn't line up," said launch director Dave King.

The next opening in the rocket lineup isn't until May 18. Unless something changes, that may well be Atlantis' next shot -- whether NASA likes it or not.

Shuttle managers ought to have a new launch date by early next week, King said. One option is for Atlantis to take the place of a weather satellite launch next Wednesday, but he stressed that's yet to be discussed.

NASA wants to get Atlantis and its crew of seven to the space station as soon as possible.

The 1 1/2-year-old station is slipping nearly two miles a week because of increased solar activity and the absence of Russia's long-delayed service module. Unless Atlantis gets there soon, flight controllers will have to use the limited supply of on-board fuel to move the station into a higher, safer orbit.

Atlantis and its crew were supposed to boost the space station over the up-coming week, using the shuttle's fuel. The astronauts were also supposed to replace bad batteries aboard the station.

Two of the six electricity-producing batteries have failed and two others are deteriorating. station control.

w phase that adventure seekers are currently pursuing, herself included.

"I've done it once, and I can't wait to try it again," said Ty Fletcher, 25, a BYU graduate in economics.

The popularity surrounding the sport involves convenience and accessibility.

"You can go on smaller creeks. It doesn't have to be a big river," said Trevin Ricks, an employee at the Outdoors Unlimited. "You don't need to have a shuttle, and there's always a close place to go. Rafting is more cumbersome."

Another element adding to the interest of kayaking involves the pure exhilaration of human versus nature.

"With kayaking, you tend to find more freedom, it's just you and your boat," said Jamie Baucum, paddle sports manager at Sidsports Inc. in Salt Lake City. "You're able to go on more rivers than rafts, plus you can do more tricks and moves on your own than you can rafting."

This might be the case; however, the attraction doesn't stop there. Organized sports such as baseball and football are losing their appeal.

For the majority, one can only go so far in team-oriented sports, especially when skill level and competition factors increase with age. Here is where individual sports like mountain biking and kayaking step in. Entire families can participate, clubs are being created and large groups of friends are jumping on the band wagon.

"I'm trying to get a club started at UVSC," said Matt Johnson, a river guide during the summer for World Wide Expeditions.

Johnson got involved with kayaking because he got bored with other sports. Johnson said kayaking never leaves him disappointed and is exciting every time he goes.

"People are moving away from organized sports, with kayaking you can be your own superstar until the day you die," Baucum said.

The sport is on the rise. However, there are certain key safety factors that one should know before hitting those rivers.

Johnson said each river has a specific rating which indicates the level of difficulty. The system is much like rock climbing. Each individual route has a number classifying the complexity of the climb.

In kayaking, rivers or "runs" are based on "classes." A class one river is the easiest. The rating system goes up to class seven, which according to Baucum, is virtually impossible.

"For most kayakers, class five is the limit." Baucum said.

Precaution is an essential ingredient, especially for beginners.

"Most of the time, danger consists of the actual person boating not properly assessing the location they want to ride," Baucum said. "It is a highly dangerous sport when you don't evaluate your own skill level with that of the run."

"Everyone should be worried about it (safety), you should never do it alone, there is always a risk," Johnson said.

Sometimes the mistake a person makes could be his last, Baucum said.

Lehi Roller Mills 'flours' through years of family tradition

By Lyman Kirkland
lyman@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

In a flour mill that is a historic landmark and is famous for its role in the movie "Footloose," R. Sherman Robinson, president of Lehi Mill, is taking centuries of flour-milling heritage into the 21st century.

Lehi Mill (also known as Lehi Roller Mills) is one of the few surviving flour mills of its size in the United States. In 1942, 4,000 flour mills were in operation in the United States. Today there are fewer than 300, and Lehi Roller Mills is about one-tenth the size of a typical flour mill, Robinson said. So how has Lehi Mill been able to survive?

"We're just stubborn," Robinson said. "One of the things that Dad and Grandpa were real keen on is that they were entrepreneurs."

The Lehi mill was built in 1906. Robinson's grandfather, George Robinson, bought the mill in 1910 and ran it until he died in 1936. Robinson's father (who was also named Sherman) took over when George Robinson died.

But Robinson's milling roots go back farther than that. For the past 200 years there has been a flour mill in operation in the United States under the Robinson name, and Robinson has found ancestors back to the 1500s who were millers in England.

From his earliest memories, Robinson can remember being around the mill. He officially started working at the mill in his early teens. He knew he had won over the older workers when they stopped calling him "boy" and started calling him by his first name. One of those men, Farrell Jorgensen of American Fork, had a significant impact on Robinson's career at the mill.

"Farrell and I were good buds," he said. "He taught me how to drive truck, load a truck right and how to bag flour."

Robinson, who graduated from BYU with a bachelor's degree in business and a master's degree in communications, began to manage the mill in 1976 and took over formally when his father died in 1980, he said. Jorgensen continued to work at the mill under Robinson's management until he was 85 years old. He died in 1994.

"Towards the end he got to where he couldn't do a whole lot, but we still wanted him to come in," Robinson said. "There are still people today who think Farrell was my dad."

Many people around the country and the world know Lehi Roller Mills as the mill in the 1984 motion picture "Footloose," starring Kevin Bacon.

Robinson said the Utah Film Commission persuaded him that the film would be great for the state of Utah.

People still come in every week wanting to have their picture taken at the famous mill, he said.

"It's been a fun thing and it was a good experience," he said.

Chris Parker

Lehi Roller Mills, which was built in 1906, has spent nearly $2.5 million in the past two updating the mill and adding technology

Youth treatment centers impact southern Utah communities

By Amber Albrecht
Albrecht@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Sports Writer

Settled in the mountains of southeastern Utah are facilities that house some of the nation's juvenile delinquents. Locals call them "the hoods in the woods."

Aspen Achievement Academy, Turnabout Ranch and Sorenson's Ranch School are just a few of the residential therapeutic treatment centers for at-risk teens from the United States and Canada.

The centers treat youth sex offenders, drug abusers, gang members and many other hard-to-reach adolescents. And they are certainly not the only such facilities here in Utah. Youth centers dot the map of the Beehive State.

Larry Price is the academic dean and principal of Aspen. He worked in the Utah public school system for 30 years and was the principal at Wayne County High School. He left the public setting, but not southern Utah or the field of education.

"We're just a different type of school, with a different type of student body," Price said. "Most of the time, what's lacking in these kids' lives is defined limits. We have a rigid structure and the students feel comfortable."

Perhaps they aren't comfortable all of the time. Price explained how his program operates on a level system.

"The first phase of the program involves a seven-week-long wilderness trek," Price said. "The physical hardships of the trek subdue the students as they develop self-discipline and problem-solving skills.

"Every person is part of a group, which includes a therapist, teachers, medical personnel and other students," he said. "Highly trained instructors and an emergency response team help to ensure the safety of all students at all times."

In years past, the public has heard of negative experiences on these "treks." Mishaps from dehydration to death have been caused by the physically grueling expeditions in the harsh mountains of Utah. But Price is positive that Aspen is safe in every way.

Shane Sorenson of Sorenson's Ranch School in Koosharem, Sevier County, agrees that most behavioral modification programs are safe.

"Our program doesn't consist of a lengthy wilderness trek," Sorenson said. "We go on a lot of hikes, but they aren't survival oriented, and much of the negative publicity from years past has stopped many programs from the treks as well."

So why are these programs so prevalent in Utah?

Sorenson cites several factors as reasons for the plethora of alternative schools.

"First, Utah has a lot of open, rural environment," Sorenson said. "Since the urbanization of society, the youth have lost numerous opportunities to exercise physical and biological cues. We offer rural environments for students to redevelop a sense of being."

Sorenson also cited the morality of the people here in Utah as a reason for the success of youth programs.

"We don't have to spend as much time worrying about a staff that is dedicated to the work, and that enables us to focus on the kids."

Lastly, Sorenson believes the idea of psychological treatments in a natural setting was originated by several BYU professors, including Dr. Larry Jensen and Dr. Larry Olsen, and hence has caught on quickly in Utah.

"This idea has filtered out to a lot of philosophical idealizations that adolescent problems are dealt with effectively in nonstatic environments," he said.

It would seem that communities would be thrilled to have programs like these in their area. However, some residents aren't so enthusiastic.

Carl Albrecht, a former citizen and frequent visitor of Wayne County said, "Aspen is very prevalent in the county as far as economics goes, but they are too prevalent in the surrounding mountains that we all enjoy. It gets to be too much when you want to go for a nice ride and you run into several large groups of kids scattered across the hills."

The treatment centers are an economic asset for the surrounding communities. Visitors driving down the small main street of Loa, Wayne County can't help but notice that thr largest buildings in tow name, "Aspen A Sorenson's ranch em people, and of those, are native to the area.

"Aspen Academy hel this area," Price said. 12 kids enrolled, ther staff members from rounding towns."

Even with additiona ment, the programs f tioning residents.

"It's a unique progr have mixed emotions Diane Durfey, a long- dent of Wayne Count Aspen.

A man who, in his first years as equipment manager, would spend two hours sewing the lettering of "BRIGHAM YOUNG UNIVERSITY" on every uniform.

Johnson has so shaped BYU sports that last September he became the first person other than a coach or administrator to receive the Varsity Club's Foundation of Excellence Award.

"The equipment manager should be a teacher," he said.

Johnson's curriculum is clear.

"Missions, marriage and joining the church," assistant athletic director Gary Pullins said. "That's what Floyd's about – the three prongs of the church."

Marc Roberts learned Johnson's message for freshmen on the men's basketball team on the first day of practice last fall.

"You can't get a pair of shoes until you memorize Doctrine and Covenants section 4," Johnson said matter-of-factly.

The Shawn Bradleys and Robbie Reids of BYU's basketball past had learned the vintage missionary verses and done their two-year service.

Who's to say Roberts and fellow freshman John Allen would be any different?

"He got me thinking about and preparing for my mission," said Roberts, who will serve in Mendoza, Argentina, this summer.

He did the same for junior guard Todd Christensen.

"He'd call everyone 'Elder,'" Christensen said.

"Sometimes you'll hear a recruit say, 'I don't know if I'm going to go on a mission,'" junior forward Nathan Cooper said. "Then I think, 'Just wait until they talk to Brother J.'"

As BYU's equipment manager for 40 years, Floyd Johnson, 81, shared his testimony with hundreds of athletes, encouraging dozens to serve LDS missions and helping others join the faith.

Chris Parkinson/ Universe

Brother J – it's a nickname Johnson earned in 1959, when returned-missionary athletes were an anomaly. It was then that Brother J went to work, openly encouraging missionary service.

When Johnson began at BYU in 1957, there was one returned missionary on the football team – LeGrand Young, father of NFL star Steve Young.

When the Cougars won the national championship in 1984, there were 52.

"He played a paramount role," former BYU athletic director Glenn Tuckett said. "Floyd and (trainer) Rod Kimball were two of the prime movers" in helping athletes go on missions.

Question now is, when will Johnson quit?

"You're going to have to ask the Lord that," he said. "He keeps my time. I want to stay through as long as I'm worth anything to anybody."

When athletic department officials realized they had been underpaying Johnson for years, they encouraged him to retire in 1984 to collect benefits for leaving in his 65th year, then subsequently rehired him for part-time pay.

Thirteen years later, the administration wanted him out when it was discovered that Johnson's situation violated school policy.

Lawyers told Johnson he could sue, but he would have nothing of it.

"The only thing I asked was that they let me work without salary," he said.

And so he does, putting in as many as eight hours on game nights.

Retirement?

"I don't think he has that word in his vocabulary," Pullins said.

After all, Johnson still has socks to wash and wisdom to impart.

Theft

From April 13 to 26, 10 bicycles were reported stolen. The thefts took place at the Wilkinson Student Center, the Harold B. Lee Library, the J. Rueben Clark Law Building and Helaman Halls. The bikes ranged in value from $50 to $600 dollars.

The thefts are still under investigation. University Police are urging students to lock their bicycles, preferably with a "U" lock.

On April 18, a law student reported his laptop computer stolen from the J. Rueben Clark Law Library. The laptop computer was a Toshiba valued at $2,000 dollars.

The computer was left unattended in an unlocked study carrel. The case is under investigation.

•From April 13 to 26, six cases of textbook theft were reported. In two cases, suspects were identified and are now being dealt with in the Honor Code office and the local courts.

Two more cases are under investigation and University Police are questioning possible suspects.

Some suspects were identified when they attempted to sell the stolen textbooks to the Bookstore.

More student parking made available

NewsNet Services

More parking slots will be opened to students during the spring and summer months to alleviate student traffic.

Students will now be able to park in the G lots, which are normally open for graduate students. They sit just east of the J. Reuben Clark Law Building, and west of the N. Eldon Tanner Building.

"We still enforce the traffic rules, but don't look for specific permits in those areas," said Sgt Russ Fuller of University police. "All we ask is 'do they have a BYU permit'."

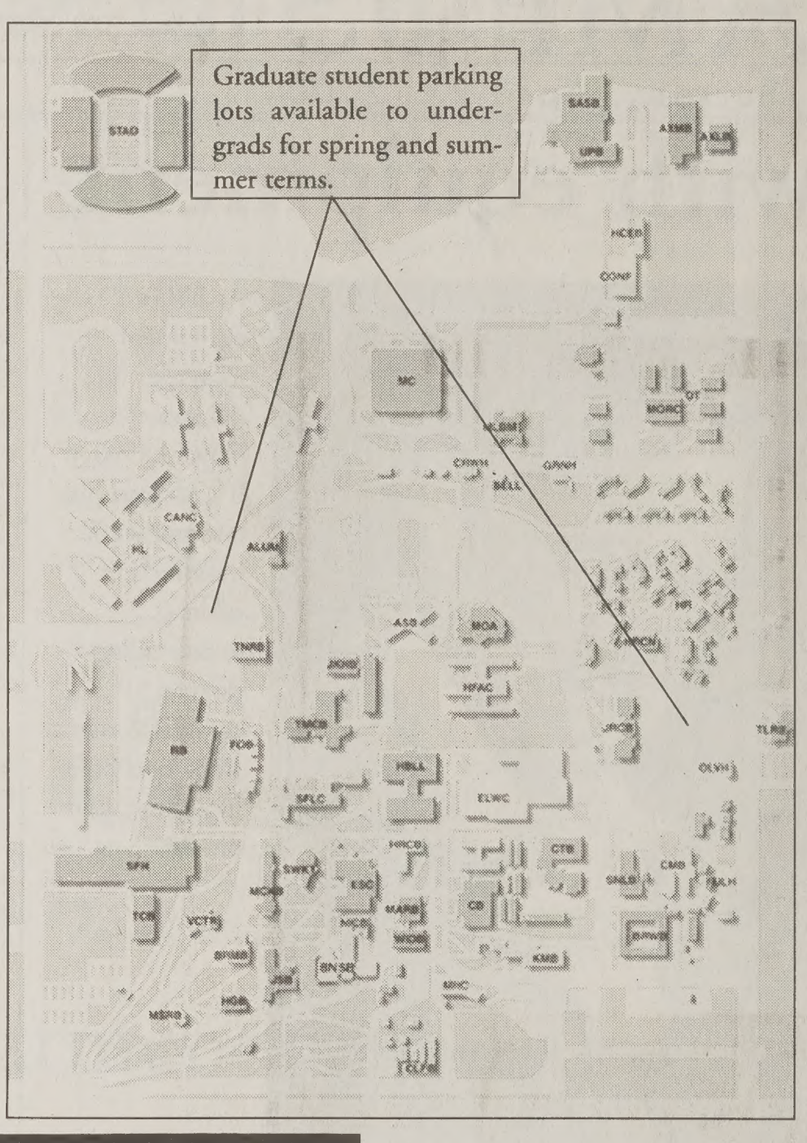
Fuller and traffic supervisor Treena Bolingbroke said they expect parking frustrations to ease, at least while the spring and summer policy is enforced.

Lack of parking ranked fourth among student complaints in a report issued by the Vista committee during the Winter semester.

Bolingbroke said out-of-town visitors make parking enforcement a more challenging task.

Students who have not bought a parking sticker can get one at the Traffic office. Stickers are $15 for undergraduates for one full year and $5 for the Spring and Summer terms, Fuller said.

The traffic office is open 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.



Registration glitches decrease

Technology makes registration easier over the years

> "Although AIM has greatly improved, we want to make it even better through on-going efforts."
> — Terri Zaugg, registrar's office

The Office of Information Technology is expecting fall registration to be the biggest non-event since Y2K.

After implementing various changes in the Route Y and academic information management system, the registration process continues to improve, according to an OIT news release.

Gone are the days of long lines where students would wait for hours in hopes of obtaining the valued course card for each class.

Gone are the days of mail-in requests, where students sent in their needed courses but had no choice of sections or teachers.

According to the OIT, in 1984 the touch-tone phone registration was introduced, giving students the ability to choose the section, class and instructor.

More flexibility and features were provided when the online AIM registration system began in 1999. Prior to that time, AIM was available only through on-campus kiosks.

Presently, AIM accounts for approximately 80 percent of all registration transactions, while 20 percent use the phone, according to the OIT.

In the past, this high demand has created a number of challenges.

For example, the OIT reported that in October 1999, a system overload caused registration delays.

A number of changes have been implemented to improve system reliability, including an increase in the server capacity for AIM and a change in the database server.

Also, the registration periods and times were altered to alleviate the system load. The registration period was spread out and the registration times moved from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m.

"We're hoping students the marked improvement current registration co with last October," said Allen, IT customer relatio ager from the Offi Information Technology.

Besides these improv additional AIM features a considered.

"We're constantly try identify student's needs i to improve AIM, so we w any feedback," said Terri Z representative of the reg office.

The OIT is constantly changes and attempting to the system.

"Although the AIM d server is more stable now the past, we are aware tha sional down times occurred," said Eric Denn president of tech "However, future upgrad planned to provide ever capacity and stability."

The sentiment is throughout campus, and th to upgrade the system co is present.

"Although AIM has improved, we want to r even better through o efforts," Zaugg said.

History of Timpanogos told through Utah ballet

The Utah Regional Ballet will present "Legend of Timpanogos" Friday and Saturday in the de Jong Concert Hall in the HFAC as part of BYU's Community Concert Series.

Melynda Burt, publicist for the Utah Regional Ballet, said "Legend of Timpanogos" is regarded as the company's signature piece.

Utah Regional Ballet is an independent company that is housed at Utah Valley State College, where they practice and often perform.

It is a Utah Valley independent ballet company, and they do have full time professional ballet dancers, Burt said.

Jacqueline Colledge, artistic director and founder of Utah Regional Ballet, both produced and choreographed this full-length ballet.

Burt said Colledge got the inspiration for the ballet from the time she heard the legend as a fourth grader at Lehi Elementary School. The legend made a big impression on Colledge as a child, she said.

While Colledge wrote the ballet, she worked with American Indians to learn their sign language to aid in the choreography, to help tell the story.

Burt said the opening performance is George Balanchine's "Serenade."

Burt said this dance is famous and very well known and loved in the dance world, and they had to have special permission to perform it.

"Legend of Timpanogos" will be performed Friday and Saturday night at 7:30, and Saturday at 2 p.m. Tickets cost $14. Students and seniors receive a $2 discount. For more information or tickets call (801) 378-4322.

'Arabian Nights' graces Springville stage

Seventy children from the ages of 5 to 18 will take the stage Friday in the Villa Playhouse Theatre production of "Aladdin and Tales of Arabian Nights."

The production is a musical production that is part of the Villa Youtheatre program.

Esther Covington, director of publicity and marketing at the playhouse, said the show is aimed toward families.

"Because it is performed by youth, they are fun for kids to watch. If you are looking for deep show with deep meaning, it doesn't have it," Covington said.

The play is written by Michael Bigelow Dixon, directed by Anna Murdock and features music by Jan Cole and Cami Jensen.

The play tells the story of a sultan who is bewitched by a magic scimitar, which decrees that the sultan will marry a new bride each evening and kill her the next morning.

One of the brides tells the sultan stories all night for 1001 nights, thus thwarting the scimitar's murderous plan. The play tells the tale of five of the 1001 stories.

> "Because it is performed by youth, they are fun for kids to watch." — Esther Covington, Playhouse publicity

Covington said the show offers a lot of eye-pleasing effects.

"They have fog and flashy strobe lights and flash pots and little explosions, with some pyrotechnics going. The sets are cool and they have great costumes," she said.

Kari Newman, 15, is a member of the Youtheatre program. She plays the part of a narrator and Morgiana in "Aladdin and Tales of Arabian Nights."

Newman also gave some helpful hints to someone wanting to see the program.

"You might not want to pay attention to the dances because they still mess up a little. The snake charmer and his wife scene, I like that one. The part of Morgiana, she's very sarcastic sometimes and it's just very funny," Newman said.

Newman said some of the participants in the plays are very noteworthy.

"The girl who plays Sheherazade, Laura Money, is just amazing in her ability. I haven't seen a better actor her age anywhere around here," Newman said.

Newman said that while some participants are experienced and talented, the Youtheatre program is such that anyone ages 5 to 18 could join. All a person has to do is register and then pay a monthly fee and a lab fee for each production.

"You can just do one play and stop, or you can just be a regular and do every single one you do," Newman said.

She also said the program offers a part for everyone wishing to participate. If a person is not very good, the director will give them a non-speaking part.

"The strength of your ability determines how big your part will be," she said.

Newman said one girl with mental difficulty was given a part in the chorus.

Newman said she began the program when she was nine years old, and she has been participating in it ever since then.

"I just love the thrill of being on stage and having an audience and know that they're cheering for you. You work so hard for all those months and you get all that satisfaction," she said.

Covington said the children's love of performing is why most youth participate in the program.

Newman said she plans on participating in the program as long as she can, and then hopefully take that experience on to a theater career in college.

"Some of my best friends are in this. I like the performance and I like the costumes, even if it isn't the performance," she said.

The play will run Friday through May at the Villa Playhouse Theatre at 254 S. Main St. in Springville. Performances will be Monday, Friday and Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets for "Aladdin and Tales of Arabian Nights" are $7 general admission, $6 senior citizens and students, $5 children ages three to 11 and $30 for a family pass.

Golfers take 2nd at MWC tourney

By Ashlee Ainge
ashlee@newsroom.byu.edu
Associate Sports Editor

For some overachievers, second place is never good enough.

As the BYU women's golf team returns from its Mountain West Conference Championship in St. George, the excitement they should feel in placing second is hidden by their disappointment of not nabbing first prize.

Mountain West Conference Player of the Year Carrie Summerhays lost her lead in the last part of the final round of the tournament. Jordan Lintz of Wyoming stole the trophy after winning by three strokes.

"I feel like I should have won," Summerhays said. "I had two holes that cost me four strokes. I double-bogied on the 11th and the second holes. Other than that, I felt that I played a great round. To be honest, I'm really kind of shocked. I think those two holes cost me the championship."

Summerhays also collected first-team Mountain West Conference honors because of her season in which she lead the Cougars in every tournament.

BYU as a team missed out on the first place honors because of the consistent play and great putting exhibited by New Mexico.

Ranked No. 14 heading into the tournament, the success of the Lobos was a surprise to everyone.

Cougar sophomore Adrianne Gibby, who shot a career low of 70 and a career tournament low of 226 was amazed that BYU's success didn't prove strong enough to win the medal.

"We fought really hard, and I was excited about my scores. It just wasn't quite enough," Gibby said.

Gibby was not alone in her success. Fellow Cougar Jessica Gardner also shot a personal low of 73 and placed eighth overall.

"I felt really good today. I played with total confidence and just went out there and attacked the holes," Gardner said.

With a Player of the Year Award, two personal bests and a second place in the Mountain West Conference, you'd think the Cougar would be rejoicing.

Instead, while recognizing the victories they also recognize the places they need to improve.

"I pretty much got everything I set out to accomplish except for the tournament win. I'm happy for the way our team played and you've got to feel good about what Jessica and Adrianne did today. I should have achieved a personal best as well," Summerhays said.

The Cougars' season is not finished yet and perhaps in the upcoming tournaments they can achieve enough success to at least make themselves happy.

The Weber State Invitational is in Ogden on May 2 and BYU will most likely be invited to the NCAA Western Regional Invitational.

BYU Golfer Jessica Gardener shows off her stroke at a tournament ealier this season. Gardener scored a career low at the Mountain West Conference Championships Wednesday to help the Cougars win second place.

BYU and Utah to slug it out

By Sam Neff
sam@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Sports Editor

The Blue-Red rivalry heats up once again today as the Cougars head to Franklin Covey Field to begin a three-game series with Utah that continues through Friday and Saturday.

The Cougars lead the Mountain West Conference in team batting average (.333), slugging percentage (.525), hits (537) and homers (53). They are second in the conference with a 5.39 ERA.

BYU swept Utah in a three-game series in Provo earlier this season, but the games weren't the slugfests the Cougar batters are accustomed to. The Utes kept it close 5-2, 4-3 and 4-2.

"Utah has been playing well and I'm sure they'll want to avenge the sweep we had earlier in Provo, so we need to be ready for all three games," BYU Coach Vance Law said in a news release.

Law said the team's goal is to get the No. 1 seed going into the conference tournament. The goal was kept alive when San Diego State swept New Mexico in a three-game series last week.

The Cougars snapped a five-game losing streak last weekend when they won the first two games of a three-game series at Air Force. Air Force fought back from a two-run deficit in the ninth inning to win game three.

"We hope to finish our final nine games of the regular season in good fashion," Law said. "We've got some good athletes who have worked hard to improve. I am proud of our team the way they battled hard in rough conditions last weekend at Air Force."

Outfielder Matt Carson tied a school record last weekend when he was hit by a pitch for the 12th time this season.

The probable pitching rotation will be Jeff Stone (8-4, 5.94) today, Micah Mangrum (6-6, 4.15) on Friday and Jordan Opdahl (3-0, 3.92) on Saturday.

All games are slated for noon. Fans attending Saturday's game are invited to stay for a double-header featuring the Salt Lake Buzz and Tucson Sidewinders. The games can also be heard on KSRR Radio (1400 AM).

Catcher Casey Cloward looks for a pop fly in a game against Southern Utah earlier this season. The Cougars play three games at Utah this weekend starting today.

Knicks sneak past Raptors

Associated Press

Vince Carter rebounded from his ghastly 3-for-20 effort in Game 1 and led the Raptors with 27 points, but he was unable to stop Sprewell man-to-man as New York kept running the same play in the final few minutes.

On the deciding play, Sprewell got the ball isolated on the right wing against Carter and drove to his right, pulling up in the lane for a short jumper that gave the Knicks their first lead since the second minute of the game.

With teammates hugging him at midcourt while Toronto called timeout, Sprewell pleaded with them to play defense, yelling "One stop!"

The Raptors were able to inbound to Carter, who won four games during the regular season with buzzer-beating shots. But his in-air decision to pass to Dee Brown turned out to be the wrong one.

Johnson scored eight straight points for the Knicks midway through the fourth quarter to help cut a 14-point deficit to three, and Sprewell scored New York's next 11 points on three jumpers — including a 3-pointer — and four foul shots to give the Knicks their first tie since early in the first quarter, 78-78.

Muggsy Bogues hit a 3-pointer from the corner with 1:33 left and Patrick Ewing dunked to make it 81-80 heading into the final minute. Carter and Allan Houston each hit a pair of free throws before Carter missed a 3-pointer with 25.6 seconds left and the Raptors leading 83-82.

Ewing had 19 points, Houston 12 and Johnson 11 for the Knicks, who got their act together in the fourth quarter after playing with a noticeable lack of intensity in the first three quarters — enough to draw boos from the sellout crowd.

Unlike Game 1, the Raptors looked relaxed in the opening quarter as they quickly took a comfortable lead. A dunk by Tracy McGrady made the score 20-11 as Toronto hit eight of its first 11 shots, and a layup by Kevin Willis at the buzzer gave the Raptors their first double-digit lead, 26-15.

Cougar track heads to Penn relays

The women's track and field team splits up this weekend to participate in two tradition-rich meets.

The Cougars will take their distance relay teams to the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia for the 109th Annual Penn Relays April 27-28.

Several athletes participating in field events will go to Drake University in Des Moines for the Drake Relays April 28-29.

At Drake, Anna-Lee Carter will compete in the high jump, Becky Beachler will throw the shotput and Becky Jackson will compete in the pole vault.

BYU takes a talented distance squad to Philadelphia. At the Penn Relays last year the Cougar finished second in the 4x800-meter relay and are expected to challenge defending champion Florida for first place. The Cougars also finished second in the 4x1500-meter relay in 1999.

Athletes of the week

BYU tracksters Kirsten Bolm and Kenneth Andam were named McLeodUSA Mountain West Conference Men's and Women's Outdoor Track and Field Athletes of the Week.

Bolm earned three first-place finishes at the Robison Invitational in Provo last weekend. Bolm beat former Cougar and 2000 Olympian Tiffany Lott in the 100-meter hurdles with a time of 13.08.

Bolm out-distanced all competitors by over two feet in the long jump and took first in the 100-meter dash.

Andam earned three first-place finishes in his first full meet since recovering from a stress fracture in his leg.

Andam won the 100- and 200-meter dash. He also anchored the Cougars' first-place 4x100-meter relay team.

BYU and Utah to slug it out

By Sam Neff

Catcher Casey Cloward looks for a pop fly in a game against Southern Utah earlier this season. The Cougars play three games at Utah this weekend starting today.

The Blue-Red rivalry heats up once again today as the Cougars head to Franklin Covey Field to begin a three-game series with Utah that continues through Friday and Saturday.

The Cougars lead the Mountain West Conference in team batting average (.333), slugging percentage (.525), hits (537) and homers (53). They are second in the conference with a 5.39 ERA.

BYU swept Utah in a three-game series in Provo earlier this season, but the games weren't the slugfests the Cougar batters are accustomed to. The Utes kept it close 5-2, 4-3 and 4-2.

"Utah has been playing well and I'm sure they'll want to avenge the sweep we had earlier in Provo, so we need to be ready for all three games," BYU Coach Vance Law said in a news release.

Law said the team's goal is to get the No. 1 seed going into the conference tournament. The goal was kept alive when San Diego State swept New Mexico in a three-game series last week.

The Cougars snapped a five-game losing streak last weekend when they won the first two games of a three-game series at Air Force. Air Force fought back from a two-run deficit in the ninth inning to win game three.

"We hope to finish our final nine games of the regular season in good fashion," Law said. "We've got some good athletes who have worked hard to improve. I am proud of our team the way they battled hard in rough conditions last weekend at Air Force."

Outfielder Matt Carson tied a school record last weekend when he was hit by a pitch for the 12th time this season.

The probable pitching rotation will be Jeff Stone (8-4, 5.94) today, Micah Mangrum (6-6, 4.15) on Friday and Jordan Opdahl (3-0, 3.92) on Saturday.

All games are slated for noon. Fans attending Saturday's game are invited to stay for a double-header featuring the Salt Lake Buzz and Tucson Sidewinders. The games can also be heard on KSRR Radio (1400 AM).

Knicks sneak past Raptors

Associated Press

Vince Carter rebounded from his ghastly 3-for-20 effort in Game 1 and led the Raptors with 27 points, but he was unable to stop Sprewell man-to-man as New York kept running the same play in the final few minutes.

On the deciding play, Sprewell got the ball isolated on the right wing against Carter and drove to his right, pulling up in the lane for a short jumper that gave the Knicks their first lead since the second minute of the game.

With teammates hugging him at midcourt while Toronto called timeout, Sprewell pleaded with them to play defense, yelling "One stop!"

The Raptors were able to inbound to Carter, who won four games during the regular season with buzzer-beating shots. But his in-air decision to pass to Dee Brown turned out to be the wrong one.

Johnson scored eight straight points for the Knicks midway through the fourth quarter to help cut a 14-point deficit to three, and Sprewell scored New York's next 11 points on three jumpers — including a 3-pointer — and four foul shots to give the Knicks their first tie since early in the first quarter, 78-78.

Men's lacrosse takes the road to victory

Midfielder Stephan Heilner runs down the sideline in a game earlier this year against the University of Michigan. Men's lacrosse heads to Colorado this weekend for The Rocky Mountain Intercollegiate Lacrosse League Playoffs.

BYU Lacrosse begins its post-season quest to the National Championships this weekend in Colorado.

Success there, in The Rocky Mountain Intercollegiate Lacrosse League Playoffs will reserve a spot for the Cougars in St. Louis for the National Championships.

Although Provo is far from St. Louis, that road to success is very familiar to the BYU Lacrosse team.

Since their reign as National Champions in 1997, the team has appeared at the tournament in St. Louis every year. Although the Cougars entered the 1999 tournament as the No. 1 seed, they were the victims of a shocking upset and ninth seed Cal-Berkeley sent them home after their first game.

BYU will arrive at this year's tournament with only four losses. Unfortunately, one of those Lfs was to Colorado State, the team the Cougars will face first on Friday.

The score of the last meeting, 21-11, is a spread that lacrosse Coach Jason Lamb believes puts the Rams too high above the Cougars. He feels that they got beat by much more than they should have and that Colorado State is a team that BYU can definitely overcome.

"We need to tighten up the defense a little bit, improve faceoffs and not throw the ball away. Last game we threw the ball away quite a bit and we lost a lost of faceoffs," explained senior midfield Tommy Hawes.

All four BYU defeats occurred on away games, a factor that Hawes believes can be overcome.

"It is helpful to play at home, but three of the four games we lost on the road we could have won easily. Most of the games were close and full of unforced errors," Hawes said.

If the Cougars advance to the second round, they will play the winner of Colorad... versity and. Fort Lewis College, which the ... say should definitely be Colorado University.

> "We know what to expect fro... Colorado, the only question i... we'll show up to play them—
> Jason La...
> Lacrosse Head Co...

"We know what to expect from Colorado," ... yelled out to his team in a huddle at Wedne... practice. "The only question is if we'll shov... play them."

Wednesday's practice was much shortu... lighter than usual. Lamb wanted the play... leave feeling good about themselves. He kne... confidence would help them to accompli... goals they have set.

"Let's just have fun. When we have our ... and lighten up that is the kind of lacrosse ... like to be around,"Lamb said.

Lamb is confident in the talent and creativ... his players. He coached them all that the off... structures they work on in practice are s... back-up plans.

"I never want to take a green light away f... consistent player with a great idea," Lamb sa...

Hoping to perform like they know they ca... team is excited to charge through this reg... tournament and make their way to Nationals.

"I would say that we are on par with any te... the country in our league. It just depends who... more heart and who wants it more that ... Hawes said.

Women use experience, spirit to speak

BY Jennifer Groskreutz
groskreutz@newsroom.byu.edu
Special to The Universe

Whether speaking to groups at Girl's Academy or addressing teen-age audiences at youth conferences, those scheduled to speak at Women's Conference are no strangers to the stage.

Cheryl Brown-Mitchell, a six-time Relief Society president and new wife and mother, is used to having all eyes focused on her.

Her topic for Women's Conference is "Her Children Rise Up and Call Her Blessed."

Her topic was assigned. Brown-Mitchell said assigned topics are not all that bad.

"Sometimes it's easier if you have a guideline to start with," she said. "Either way it takes the same kind of work to find out what Heavenly Father would have you say."

Brown-Mitchell said inspiration plays a big role in the preparation of her talks. Speaking with the Spirit is vital to the success of a talk, she said.

"There's nothing wonderful about a talk that doesn't have the Spirit. The talk won't do what it's intended to do if you don't have the Spirit," she said.

Over the last 25 years, Brown-Mitchell has worn several hats at BYU. She was a professor of linguistics, taught a Book of Mormon class, served as an associate dean for the College of Humanities and served as the associate vice president of academics.

She has also been the featured speaker at a few Devotionals.

She left it all though, to get married.

"I wasn't sure it was the right thing to do," she said.

Brown-Mitchell said she always hopes for an audience interested in her topic.

When she speaks at Women's Conference, she said she will draw upon personal experiences to use as examples.

Her background is filled with experience counseling and working with young adults.

But personal experience is not all Brown-Mitchell will draw upon for her talk.

"Part of it is going to be what church leaders and the scriptures say about counseling together, teaching and encouraging," she said. "Being a Relief Society president, a lot of it ends up being counseling."

> "There's nothing wonderful about a talk that doesn't have the Spirit. The talk won't do what it's intended to do if you don't have the Spirit."
> — Cheryl Brown-Mitchell, Women's Conference speaker

Sister Janette Hales Beckham, former Young Women general president, will be speaking with her.

Stana Smoot Kjar, the daughter of Mary Ellen Smoot, Relief Society general president, will also speak at this year's Women's Conference.

Smoot Kjar has spoken at Girl's Academy and at several Young Women's events. She is a former ward Relief Society president.

Her sister, Shauna Smoot Essig, and her sister-in-law Stacey Burns Smoot, will speak with her.

In their talk, "O Woman, Great is Thy Faith," the women will speak about those who have affected Sister Smoot's life.

They'll talk about other women who have strengthened Sister Smoot in her life.

"People like to know what crossroads individuals come across," Smoot Kjar said.

She said the women have divided their subject into three areas.

"My sister, Shauna, is speaking about ancestral women, who came before my mother, and women in her life, non-related, that came at important crossroads," she said. "I am speaking about her mothering experiences as a child growing up."

Burns Smoot said she will speak about Sister Smoot as a mother-in-law and as a grandmother.

By covering the different aspects of Sister Smoot's life, Smoot Kjar said the talk should touch everyone in the audience whether they're single, married or a grandma.

are many resources avail- r women on campus nout the year such as 's Services and es, the Compre- Clinic and the ing and Career n's Services and ces, a place to base and get d to other es, provides workshops out the year. Some of the f the workshops include on, body image and mar- hancement.

Thunell, secretary at s Services and Resources, e is a mentoring program for multicultural women.

Sometimes the counselors at Women's Services and Resources refer people to a counseling center for therapy, but a lot depends on individual circumstances, Thunell said.

"If girls come to us, we can help girls get to where they need, but a lot of people don't know we are here," Thunell said.

One of the counseling centers on campus is the Comprehensive Clinic, although, according to Dean Barley, the assistant for clinical services at the clinic, only about 30 percent of the clientele are from campus. Most of the clients are from the community, he said.

The Comprehensive Clinic offers individual, couple, family and group therapy.

The other counseling center on campus, the Counseling and Career Center, also provides individual and group therapy.

According to DeMoyne Bekker, clinical director of the center, all the clients at the Counseling and Career Center are students and about 60 percent of the clients are women.

Bekker said the center works closely with Women's Services and Resources.

Counselors help people with eating disorders and re-entry student issues. Counselors also help single and divorced students.

Delora Bertelsen, managing director of benefits, employee relations and opportunity at the Equal Opportunity Office said communication skills are usually part of any issue that comes up at the Equal Opportunity Office.

concert will be the debut for most of the pieces. Many of the composers will have never heard their songs sung by a choir until the concert," Webb said.

Choir members come from all over Utah. They will rehearse nine times before the concert.

In addition to this performance, Webb's choir will also sing in the closing session of the conference.

"We will sing an original piece about temple work by Virginia Watson and a piece made famous by Barbara Streisand titled 'On Holy Ground,'" Webb said.

Because of its success, the second choir, known as the instant choir, will return to this year's Women's Conference, Webb said.

"We had approximately 575 women show up to rehearse and sing with us last year," she said.

Although they rehearsed only two times, Webb said the performance was well received.

She said Ardeth Kapp described last year's experience as Pentecostal.

"They will be singing in the opening and closing sessions on Thursday and Friday. They will rehearse three times for a total of three hours learning five songs and two hymns. It will be miraculous," Webb said.

The spirit of the choirs also impresses Duane Hiatt, director of editorial and media production for the division of Continuing Education.

"Their singing is a testimony of dedication that many times, you can't understand in the spoken or written word," Hiatt said.

Women who are interested in joining the instant choir can download the music form the Women's Conference website and attend the rehearsals.

A participant in the Women's Conference blood drive promotes it with her "be positive" campaign.

n's Services and ces, a place to base and get to other es, provides workshops out the year. Some of the f the workshops include on, body image and mar- nancement.

Thunell, secretary at s Services and Resources, e is a mentoring program for multicultural women.

Sometimes the counselors at Women's Services and Resources refer people to a counseling center for therapy, but a lot depends on individual circumstances, Thunell said.

"If girls come to us, we can help girls get to where they need, but a lot of people don't know we are here," Thunell said.

One of the counseling centers on campus is the Comprehensive Clinic, although, according to Dean Barley, the assistant for clinical services at the clinic, only about 30 percent of the clientele are from campus. Most of the clients are from the community, he said.

The Comprehensive Clinic offers individual, couple, family and group therapy.

The other counseling center on campus, the Counseling and Career Center, also provides individual and group therapy.

According to DeMoyne Bekker, clinical director of the center, all the clients at the Counseling and Career Center are students and about 60 percent of the clients are women.

Bekker said the center works closely with Women's Services and Resources.

Counselors help people with eating disorders and re-entry student issues. Counselors also help single and divorced students.

concert will be the debut for most of the pieces. Many of the composers will have never heard their songs sung by a choir until the concert," Webb said.

Choir members come from all over Utah. They will rehearse nine times before the concert.

In addition to this performance, Webb's choir will also sing in the closing session of the conference.

"We will sing an original piece about temple work by Virginia Watson and a piece made famous by Barbara Streisand titled 'On Holy Ground,'" Webb said.

Because of its success, the second choir, known as the instant choir, will return to this year's Women's Conference, Webb said.

"We had approximately 575 women show up to rehearse and sing with us last year," she said.

Although they rehearsed only two times, Webb said the performance was well received.

She said Ardeth Kapp described last year's experience as Pentecostal.

"They will be singing in the opening and closing sessions on Thursday and Friday. They will rehearse three times for a total of three hours learning five songs and two hymns. It will be miraculous," Webb said.

The spirit of the choirs also impresses Duane Hiatt, director of editorial and media production for the division of Continuing Education.

"Their singing is a testimony of dedication that many times, you can't understand in the spoken or written word," Hiatt said.

Women who are interested in joining the instant choir can download the music form the Women's Conference website and attend the rehearsals.

Self-reliance important for women

By Kimberly DeMucha
demucha@newsroom.byu.edu
Associate Campus Editor

Linda Kellogg was married for the first time at 19 years old. By the time she was 35 years old, she had six children.

Kellogg became a single parent as a result of divorce shortly before her 40th birthday.

She was 40 years old with no education, no job and no way to support herself or her family.

As a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Kellogg said her focus was on her family and raising her children.

"Though that focus was not wrong, I failed to prepare myself for the unimaginable," she said.

Counsel given to LDS Church members stresses the importance of motherhood to its members.

Former LDS President Ezra Taft Benson said, "Before the world was created, in heavenly councils the pattern and role of women were prescribed. Women were elected by God to be wives and mothers in Zion."

Kellogg's daughter Amy D. Barron, though happily married, said she believes there is a need for women to be self reliant in case of emergencies.

"After seeing what my mother went through, I think that it is important that women are able to take of themselves," said Barron, 23, a student in San Diego, Calif. "I plan on being a mother, but if anything ever happened to my husband I should be prepared to take care of myself and my family."

According to the United States Census Bureau, divorce rates in the Unites States are now around 50 percent. This rate is up from 43 percent in 1988.

Members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are doing better then the national average. The Latter-day Saints News reported that the divorce rate among Church members is 20 percent lower the current national average.

Additionally, members who marry in the temple have only a 6 percent divorce rate, about one-sixth the national average.

Jennifer Navarro, 25, an expectant mother in Palmdale, Calif. said, divorce is so prevalent, most people, whether their parents are divorced are not, are exposed to someone who has been affected by divorce. She said it is important to have something to fall back on.

Education is not only important for women who may get divorced, or may never get married, it is important for everyone, Navarro said. She said education is especially important for those women who just plan on staying home and raising their children.

"Women need to be active in the education of their children and families," Navarro said. "A mother who is educated and has the confidence that an education brings is just that much more able to contribute and influence their children for good."

Often it is the influence of mothers that make a difference in the lives of their children.

"It was my mother who really encouraged me, and I think parents play a very important role," Navarro said.

Divorce is not the only way that women are left alone to fend for themselves. Women who are widowed face the same plight of divorcees if they are unprepared.

According to The Plight of Widows, a publication of Empowering Widows in Development, a small British nonprofit organization, in many parts of the world the widow's life is one of utter misery.

The EWD reported estimated that in some countries over 50 percent of all adult women are widowed, and the numbers are even greater in conflict-torn regions.

Many of these widows are ostracized and forced to endure extreme poverty, illhealth, violence, homelessness and cultural discrimination, according to Child Newsline.

- According to the United States Census Bureau, divorce rates in the Unites States are roughly 50 percent. This is up from 43 percent reported in 1988.
- The Latter-day Saints News reported that the divorce rate among LDS Church members is 20 percent lower the current national average.
- LDS Church members who marry in the temple have a 6 percent divorce rate.

Cooper Burgess bends over her artwork as her daughter Adelaide drinks from a bottle. Burgess and other women say that being a women presents unique choices concerning motherhood, education and careers.

Motherhood affects many choices

By Tara McKinney
NewsNet Staff Writer

She rolls out of bed and follows the sound of whimpering across the hall.

Her baby is hungry and has a wet diaper. She nurses the infant and eats a bowl of Rice Chex. With a drowsy baby nestled in bed with dad, she walks seven blocks to class.

Later, her husband needs to go to work. He drops the baby off with her mother in class. This is the first time she has seen her husband all day. She won't see him again until he comes home from work at 2 a.m.

Welcome to the world of Cooper Burgess, wife, mother, student and artist.

Burgess, 22, a senior majoring in visual arts from Oak Hill, Va., found that all areas in her life were dictated, even the medium she used as an artist, by the birth of her 6-month-old baby girl, Adelaide.

"It's okay to poison my own lungs with the fumes from oil paints, but not my baby's. I had to switch to water colors," Burgess said.

Burgess said her busy schedule affects her relationship with her husband.

"My relationship with my husband suffers more than my relationship with my baby," Burgess said.

Laura Grover, 21, a senior majoring in human development from Clayton, Calif., said that a woman's life is full of difficult choices, but knows that her future family will be more important to her than a job in the long run.

"Sometimes I think I could be something else in my mind, but really in my heart I know that being a mother and a wife is more important than anything else in the world," Grover said.

"It's hard to be focused on that and come to college and you say 'this is what I want to be when I grow up' and not have it come to a realization," she said.

Shauna Heyman, 22, graduated in history teaching in April. Heyman said pursuing an extended education isn't practical when women are expected to drop everything and stay at home.

"It seems like women give up a lot . . . they're looked down upon for having all this ambition. I would love to go to law school, but I know I'm not going to practice. Why waste all that money and time?" Heyman said.

Joan Young, assistant director of the master of business administration program in the Marriott School, said an extended education is valuable even if a woman stays in the home.

"In the MBA program, women learn so many life-long skills, they benefit for their whole lives from what they learn. I had a girl in the program whose husband did so well she didn't have to work, and she still said that she uses her MBA every day of her life," said Young.

Young said one-third of the women in the MBA program are married.

Statistics gathered by Women's Services and Resources at BYU showed that women are joining the workforce at a rate of one million per year.

Most working women are between 25-54 years old. Most are married, and the majority of them have children under 18. Currently, 45 percent of women work full-time.

There are some who say education is the reason people should go to college, not necessarily the pursuit of a career.

"How are you going to raise your children to think education is valuable if you don't do it yourself? That's a priority that everyone should have," Burgess said.

"How are you going to raise your children to think education is valuable if you don't do it yourself?"

Utah adoption agency offers online services

By Tiffany Gee
tiffany@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

When Susan Goodall found out she could not have children 19 years ago, adopting became the next viable option.

The application for adoption took weeks, the home study by the agency took a year and the wait for the child took 18 months.

Now adoption is at the tip of hopeful parents' fingers as adoption services are moving online, making photo listings and brief biographies on each child available with a click of the mouse.

The Utah Division of Child and Family Services recently signed on by launching an interactive Web site.

The system seems almost like selecting a custom-built car, but LeRoy Franke, the state adoption specialist for Utah, said the site is not a shopping mall for families to buy children.

The reason for the online movement is that children in foster care are not being placed in homes, Franke said.

"We have a lot of children and we need to get them connected with families. This is the way to get them connected," Franke said.

The Family Services site, www.utdcfsadopt.org, leads to a link titled "child search," which provides a not-so-typical search engine.

Web site visitors can check boxes for which ethnic backgrounds they are interested in and select different special needs they would be willing to consider.

The match-up leads to pages of waiting children and their pictures, with a description of their interests and social problems. A recommendation for which type of family the caseworker prescribes for them is provided.

Complaints have come from the public about the photos that appear with a description of the children, said Kathy Searle, project manager for adoption exchange at DCFS.

"They feel that it's an invasion of privacy, and it is. But at this point, there's no other way to do it," Searle said.

"As an adoptive parent myself, I know that it's important to have the visual connection. These are tough kids, and sometimes the only thing that will get parents through the day is looking at the child and knowing they are cute to you."

When parents look at a birth child, they begin claiming parts of them, such as the similarities between hair and eyes, Searle said.

The same goes for adoptive children, she said.

Some children know they are being displayed on the site, while others remain oblivious. Of those who know, some have had a hard time with it, Searle said.

"But for some of them, it's a positive thing for them, and they don't have many positive things in their lives," Searle said.

"All they want is to get a family, and they will do anything to get a family."

The same goes for those couples anxious to have a child, said Goodall, now the mother of two adopted children.

"When you realize you can't have a baby, it's such an emotional thing. You'll take anything," she said.

Goodall said she lucked out by getting good kids, but she worries that couples make emotion-based decisions when it comes to having a child. And that type of decision can be more rampant with the ease of the Internet.

"However, if I was a young person looking for a baby, I would go over the Internet," Goodall said.

Most of the children featured on the Family Services site are older and have bounced around various foster homes.

"If a family is looking for a cute infant without abuse or neglect, they need to look elsewhere," Franke said.

For now, the Family Services Web site is receiving hundreds of hits daily.

"We'll know definitely six months from now if people are truly interested or if it's just curiosity. We know we're at least off to a good start," Searle said.

The Utah Web site is unique because it is interactive, Searle said.

An interested family can register online with its selected list of the children they are interested in.

"All families approved will be looked at by case workers through a password-protective site," Searle said.

Searle said they are able to do this type of site because the number of children available is lower than in places like California or the East Coast.

The federal government encouraged and helped fund the Family Services site, Searle said.

"The federal government is trying to push the number of adoptions by pushing online," Franke said.

While the trend for online adoption agencies is pushed across the nation through federal funding, some private organizations still opt to remain off the Web.

Confidentiality is the reason the Children's Aid Society of Utah chooses to stay offline, said Shelley Riley, a caseworker.

"That's not the way we operate. We like to work more one-on-one," Riley said.

With changing technology , Riley said she's not sure whether they will move to an online service in the future.

Women's Conference

> "Satan has unleashed a seductive campaign to undermine the sanctity of womanhood, to deceive the daughters of God and divert them from their divine destiny. He well knows women are the compassionate, self-sacrificing, loving power that binds together the human family. He would focus their interests solely on their physical attributes and rob them of their exalting roles as wives and mothers. He has convinced many of the lie that they are third-class citizens in the kingdom of God. That falsehood has led some to trade their divinely given femininity for male coarseness."

Dr. Daniel J. Fairbanks

BYU Professor of Botany and Range Science

"The Arts, the Sciences, and the Light of the Gospel"

Daniel J. Fairbanks is a professor in the Department of Botany and Range Science and was recently released as director of the Honors Program and associate dean of General Education and Honors. He received his BS in agronomy and Portuguese from BYU, his MS in plant breeding from the University of Minnesota, and his PhD in plant genetics from the University of Arizona.

Dr. Fairbanks has taught courses at BYU in biology, genetics, plant breeding, and world hunger. Senior author of the textbook Genetics: The Continuity of Life, he focuses his research on the application of DNA marker technology and DNA sequence analysis to plant genetics and breeding. He also assisted with the establishment of research programs in academic and government institutions in Brazil, Mexico, and Bolivia and, as a Fulbright scholar, taught genetics at a Brazilian university.

In addition to being a scientist, Dr. Fairbanks is an accomplished sculptor, skillfully taught by both his father and grandfather. In the Church Brother Fairbanks served a full-time mission to Brazil, was bishop of the BYU 189th Ward, and currently teaches the youth in Sunday School. He is married to Dr. Donna Pauley Fairbanks, a member of the violin faculty in BYU's School of Music. They have three children.

"Women of Light"

Performers, top left, Lita Little Giddins, Jenny Jordan Frogley, George Dyer; middle, Michael McLean, Kenneth Cope; bottom, Julia de Azevedo and Christeena Michelle Riggs will perform "Women of Light" tonight and Friday in the Marriott Center. All proceeds will go to an unannounced charity.

Concert to honor LDS women

By Annie Gardner and Garnet Deakins
annie@newsroom.byu.edu
Associate NewsNet Web Editor

As women come to Provo this weekend looking for their spiritual shot in the arm, the dose will come in many different forms, from classes and service projects to speakers and especially music.

Some popular LDS musicians will make their way to BYU tonight and Friday evening for a musical celebration of women.

"You don't want to miss this," said Michael McLean, performer and co-writer of the program.

The show is called "Women of Light: A Musical Celebration." It will feature music and dance performances to honor women of the past, present and future, including women like Eliza R. Snow, Jane Manning and Marjorie P. Hinckley.

Musical guests will include Michael McLean, Kenneth Cope, Julie de Azevedo, Lita Little Giddins, Jenny Jordan Frogley, Christeena Michelle Riggs and George Dyer.

This will be McLean's second year participating in BYU Women's Conference. He said he gained a greater appreciation for women by being involved in the conference.

"It transformed me. I saw the power of this army of devoted, spiritual, accomplishing, tremendous women. They have no idea how great they are. They are humble and sweet and devoted and terrific," McLean said.

He helped write this year's show and wants to send the message to women that "you've got to know how spectacular you are, because you are."

Performers say the event will entertain, spiritually uplift, serve others and hopefully leave everyone a little bit better.

"To just go and sing for someone means nothing to me," Kenneth Cope said. "But if I can be useful in bringing the Spirit or helping someone take a closer look at themselves or a look at what God and Christ has done for each of us, that's worth it for me."

All proceeds from this event will fund a special humanitarian project to be announced at the closing session of Women's Conference.

"If there's any way you can be there, don't miss this. All I can tell you is I'm so excited to have been a part of it. I think it's going to be extremely memorable for those who are there," McLean said.

"Women of Light" will be held tonight and Friday night at 7:30 in the Marriott Center. Ticket prices will be $12 and $15 and are available at the Marriott Center ticket office.

Gay marriage bill now Vermont law

Associated Press

MONTPELIER,Vt. -- Gov. Howard Dean signed a first-in-the-nation law Wednesday granting gay couples nearly all of the benefits of marriage.

"I think it is a courageous and powerful statement about who we are in the state of Vermont," the Democrat said. "I also believe that this legislation speaks to the heart of this state, and certainly to my heart."

The legislation creating marriage-like "civil unions" reached the governor's desk shortly before lunchtime, just a day after the House gave its final approval. And by the time of a 2 p.m. news conference, he had already signed it out of view of TV cameras, photographers and reporters.

Dean said he signed the bill privately because he did not want the ceremony to be a triumphal party by supporters of the law. Instead, he said, it was time for the state to begin healing.

"In politics, bill-signings are triumphal," he said. "They represent overcoming of one side over another. These celebrations, as the subject of the matter of the bill, will be private."

The law will allow gay couples to form civil unions beginning July 1. That will entitle them to all of the 300 or so rights and responsibilities available to married couples under Vermont law in such areas as taxes, inheritance and medical decision-making.

Other states will probably not recognize Vermont civil unions, and such status will not entitle gay couples to any the benefits available to married couples under federal law in areas such as taxes and immigration.

Nevertheless, no state has gone further than Vermont is giving gay couples something approximating marriage.

The bill came about after the Vermont Supreme Court unanimously ruled in December that gay couples were being unconstitutionally denied the benefits of marriage. The court left it up to the Legislature time to decide whether to let gays marry or to create a domestic partnership.

The legislation passed after strong debate in which opponents argued that homosexuality is "against natural law." Opponents have warned that they will make their anger known at the polls in November when members of the Legislature are up for re-election.

Under the law, gay couples will be able to go to their town clerks for licenses and have their unions certified by a judge or member of the clergy. Breakups will be handled in Family Court, just as divorces are, although they will be called dissolutions.

Some lawmakers deeply involved in the issue said they were disappointed there was no bill-signing ceremony.

"I think the story needs to be that gay and lesbian couples in Vermont had a historical day," said Democratic Rep. William Lippert, the Legislature's only openly gay member.

Relatives not allowed to visit Elian, father

Associated Press

WASHINGTON – A child psychologist who interviewed Elian Gonzalez for the government recommended Wednesday against a visit by his Miami relatives "in their current angry state." And the 6-year-old Cuban boy's father asked a federal court to allow him alone to speak for his son.

As Elian remained secluded in rural Maryland with his father, Juan Miguel Gonzalez, stepmother and half brother, Dr. Paulina F. Kernberg of Cornell University Medical College reported that Elian has had "a positive reunion with his father" and displays a "sense of well-being and happiness with his father."

Noting the anger expressed by the Miami relatives over the raid that took Elian from them Saturday, Kernberg said, "In that frame of mind, they would likely be disruptive for the child, who demands a quiet period of emotional healing from the last few weeks of stress."

She recommended the Miami relatives seek counseling "to aid them in accepting and supporting Elian's reunion with his father." The boy would benefit for now from receiving letters, photos and taped messages from them, Kernberg said.

The father asked the court to reject a bid by the boy's great-uncle and former temporary guardian, Lazaro Gonzalez, to have his lawyers and doctors see Elian and speak for him before the court.

"Lawyers for Lazaro Gonzalez – and they are Lazaro's lawyers, not Elian's – seek to use machination and legal sleight of hand to turn this court into the arbiter of an intra-family dispute," the Craig brief said. "This case cries out for this father's personal intervention to save his son from further manipulation."

The Justice Department also filed its opposition to Lazaro's motion for a court-appointed guardian to examine and speak for Elian. It pledged to provide the court with regular reports from a psychiatrist and a social worker it has hired to monitor Elian.

The 11th Circuit is considering the Miami relatives' appeal of a U.S. district court decision that threw out the political asylum petition they filed on Elian's behalf.

On Capitol Hill, Elian's Miami relatives campaigned to keep the boy in this country, despite his father's desire to take him home.

Kernberg, fluent in Spanish, spent 2 1/2 hours Tuesday with the Gonzalez family at Andrews Air Force Base just before they went to their new retreat at the Wye River Plantation on Maryland's Eastern Shore. She spent time alone with the father and with the entire family.

Ukraine marks anniversary of nuclear power plant disaster

Associated Press

KIEV, Ukraine -- In public gatherings, official statements and televised reports, Ukrainians on Wednesday marked the Chernobyl nuclear disaster with a degree of openness that contrasted sharply with the secrecy that once surrounded it.

When a reactor at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant exploded and caught fire April 26, 1986, in the world's worst nuclear accident, it was at first a nearly invisible tragedy. Soviet authorities tried to keep the accident under wraps and its deadly consequences — radiation — could not be seen with the eye.

But the aftereffects are grimly visible: an estimated 4,000 deaths among those who took part in the hasty and poorly organized cleanup; 70,000 people disabled by radiation, according to government figures.

Overall, about 3.4 million of Ukraine's 50 million people, including some 1.26 million children, are considered affected by Chernobyl, and many may not show the effects for years.

Television and newspapers dedicated much of their reporting Wednesday to the accident. Governmental officials organized news conferences, mass meetings, wreath-layings.

A religious service near St. Michael's Church in Kiev, which is dedicated to Chernobyl victims, attracted hundreds who prayed for the souls of the dead. The service was held in the middle of the night, a reminder that the Chernobyl explosion occurred before dawn.

In a special tribute, the mourners presented flowers and lit candles for the cleanup workers known as "liquidators" — some of whom died as they battled the fire at the reactor and evacuated people.

At a memorial service in Slavutich, 90 miles from the capital, where Chernobyl workers and their families live, mourners carried flowers to the memorial for the firefighters.

Although the exploded reactor is now covered in a steel-and-concrete sarcophagus, one reactor at the Chernobyl plant still runs, suffering repeated shutdowns this winter due to safety valve failures. Officials have repeatedly promised to close the plant, but say they cannot do so until the economically strapped country gets aid to help build a plant to replace the power that would be lost.

"To close down Chernobyl without proper works and financing will be very difficult," Ecology Protection Minister Ivan Zaiats said Wednesday.

Areas of Russia also were heavily affected by the disaster, and Russian President Vladimir Putin marked the day with a telegram sent to the head of the Russian organization for Chernobyl victims.

"Years have passed, but the black landmark of the Chernobyl tragedy still casts a shadow on the fate of millions of Russian people," the ITAR-Tass news agency quoted the telegram as saying.

Thousands also gathered in Minsk, the capital of Belarus, which borders Ukraine.

The accident's consequences are likely to become more visible in coming years. The number of various diseases among affected children is 17 percent higher on average than among their counterparts, and the incidence of some illnesses twice exceeds the norm, officials say.

Gay marriage bill now Vermont law

Associated Press

MONTPELIER, Vt. -- Gov. Howard Dean signed a first-in-the-nation law Wednesday granting gay couples nearly all of the benefits of marriage.

"I think it is a courageous and powerful statement about who we are in the state of Vermont," the Democrat said. "I also believe that this legislation speaks to the heart of this state, and certainly to my heart."

The legislation creating marriage-like "civil unions" reached the governor's desk shortly before lunchtime, just a day after the House gave its final approval. And by the time of a 2 p.m. news conference, he had already signed it out of view of TV cameras, photographers and reporters.

Dean said he signed the bill privately because he did not want the ceremony to be a triumphal party by supporters of the law. Instead, he said, it was time for the state to begin healing.

"In politics, bill-signings are triumphal," he said. "They represent overcoming of one side over another. These celebrations, as the subject of the matter of the bill, will be private."

The law will allow gay couples to form civil unions beginning July 1. That will entitle them to all of the 300 or so rights and responsibilities available to married couples under Vermont law in such areas as taxes, inheritance and medical decision-making.

Other states will probably not recognize Vermont civil unions, and such status will not entitle gay couples to any the benefits available to married couples under federal law in areas such as taxes and immigration.

Nevertheless, no state has gone further than Vermont is giving gay couples something approximating marriage.

The bill came about after the Vermont Supreme Court unanimously ruled in December that gay couples were being unconstitutionally denied the benefits of marriage. The court left it up to the Legislature time to decide whether to let gays marry or to create a domestic partnership.

The legislation passed after strong debate in which opponents argued that homosexuality is "against natural law." Opponents have warned that they will make their anger known at the polls in November when members of the Legislature are up for re-election.

Under the law, gay couples will be able to go to their town clerks for licenses and have their unions certified by a judge or member of the clergy. Breakups will be handled in Family Court, just as divorces are, although they will be called dissolutions.

Some lawmakers deeply involved in the issue said they were disappointed there was no bill-signing ceremony.

"I think the story needs to be that gay and lesbian couples in Vermont had a historical day," said Democratic Rep. William Lippert, the Legislature's only openly gay member.

Relatives not allowed to visit Elian, father

Associated Press

WASHINGTON – A child psychologist who interviewed Elian Gonzalez for the government recommended Wednesday against a visit by his Miami relatives "in their current angry state." And the 6-year-old Cuban boy's father asked a federal court to allow him alone to speak for his son.

As Elian remained secluded in rural Maryland with his father, Juan Miguel Gonzalez, stepmother and half brother, Dr. Paulina F. Kernberg of Cornell University Medical College reported that Elian has had "a positive reunion with his father" and displays a "sense of well-being and happiness with his father."

Noting the anger expressed by the Miami relatives over the raid that took Elian from them Saturday, Kernberg said, "In that frame of mind, they would likely be disruptive for the child, who demands a quiet period of emotional healing from the last few weeks of stress."

She recommended the Miami relatives seek counseling "to aid them in accepting and supporting Elian's reunion with his father." The boy would benefit for now from receiving letters, photos and taped messages from them, Kernberg said.

The father asked the court to reject a bid by the boy's great-uncle and former temporary guardian, Lazaro Gonzalez, to have his lawyers and doctors see Elian and speak for him before the court.

"Lawyers for Lazaro Gonzalez – and they are Lazaro's lawyers, not Elian's – seek to use machination and legal sleight of hand to turn this court into the arbiter of an intra-family dispute," the Craig brief said. "This case cries out for this father's personal intervention to save his son from further manipulation."

The Justice Department also filed its opposition to Lazaro's motion for a court-appointed guardian to examine and speak for Elian. It pledged to provide the court with regular reports from a psychiatrist and a social worker it has hired to monitor Elian.

The 11th Circuit is considering the Miami relatives' appeal of a U.S. district court decision that threw out the political asylum petition they filed on Elian's behalf.

On Capitol Hill, Elian's Miami relatives campaigned to keep the boy in this country, despite his father's desire to take him home.

Kernberg, fluent in Spanish, spent 2 1/2 hours Tuesday with the Gonzalez family at Andrews Air Force Base just before they went to their new retreat at the Wye River Plantation on Maryland's Eastern Shore. She spent time alone with the father and with the entire family.

Ukraine marks anniversary of nuclear power plant disaster

Associated Press

KIEV, Ukraine -- In public gatherings, official statements and televised reports, Ukrainians on Wednesday marked the Chernobyl nuclear disaster with a degree of openness that contrasted sharply with the secrecy that once surrounded it.

When a reactor at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant exploded and caught fire April 26, 1986, in the world's worst nuclear accident, it was at first a nearly invisible tragedy. Soviet authorities tried to keep the accident under wraps and its deadly consequences — radiation — could not be seen with the eye.

But the aftereffects are grimly visible: an estimated 4,000 deaths among those who took part in the hasty and poorly organized cleanup; 70,000 people disabled by radiation, according to government figures.

Overall, about 3.4 million of Ukraine's 50 million people, including some 1.26 million children, are considered affected by Chernobyl, and many may not show the effects for years.

Television and newspapers dedicated much of their reporting Wednesday to the accident. Governmental officials organized news conferences, mass meetings, wreath-layings.

A religious service near St. Michael's Church in Kiev, which is dedicated to Chernobyl victims, attracted hundreds who prayed for the souls of the dead. The service was held in the middle of the night, a reminder that the Chernobyl explosion occurred before dawn.

In a special tribute, the mourners presented flowers and lit candles for the cleanup workers known as "liquidators" — some of whom died as they battled the fire at the reactor and evacuated people.

At a memorial service in Slavutich, 90 miles from the capital, where Chernobyl workers and their families live, mourners carried flowers to the memorial for the firefighters.

Although the exploded reactor is now covered in a steel-and-concrete sarcophagus, one reactor at the Chernobyl plant still runs, suffering repeated shutdowns this winter due to safety valve failures. Officials have repeatedly promised to close the plant, but say they cannot do so until the economically strapped country gets aid to help build a plant to replace the power that would be lost.

"To close down Chernobyl without proper works and financing will be very difficult," Ecology Protection Minister Ivan Zaiats said Wednesday.

Areas of Russia also were heavily affected by the disaster, and Russian President Vladimir Putin marked the day with a telegram sent to the head of the Russian organization for Chernobyl victims.

"Years have passed, but the black landmark of the Chernobyl tragedy still casts a shadow on the fate of millions of Russian people," the ITAR-Tass news agency quoted the telegram as saying.
